Automated background checks are deciding who's fit for a home

But advocates say algorithms can't capture the complexity of criminal records

The White Flight From Football

Kids in mostly white upper-income communities in the Northeast, Midwest, and West are leaving football for other sports such as lacrosse or baseball.

Jails can't be "reformed"

"Prison is hell," wrote White

The knitting community is reckoning with racism

Odds are if you're in your 20s or 30s, you have at least one friend who's gotten really into knitting in the past few years.

The case for capping all prison sentences at 20 years

It may sound like an extreme, even dangerous, proposal, but there's good reason to believe it would help reduce the prison population without making America any less safe.

The sorority in the skyscraper

When a "residence and clubhouse" for young professional women offered affordable housing—and community

The Cannabis Industry Has Always Been Rooted in Racism. Black Chefs Are Pushing Back

"When [black women] fail, it is personified a little bit louder than the applause for when we achieve."

The Salad Giant Sweetgreen Has Used Hip Hop to Turn Lettuce Into Gold

But if the salad giant is so woke, why are 95 percent of its shops in majority white neighborhoods?
